PRESCRIPTION

An advanced study of a particular film genre or genres. In 2014, the course will focus on cinematic badlands. Badlands are landscapes and mediascapes associated with foreboding or desolate spaces which bear the mark of real or imaginary historical or future disasters. They work as locations and backdrops for stories about lost souls and haunted lands whose respective histories converge. We will discuss the ways in which badlands function as terminal, liminal, and/or transitional spaces in the context of narratives of settler colonisation. This course will draw on diverse examples from genres such as the Western, the road movie, and the war film, and from different periods and production contexts.

COURSE CONTENT

Badlands work as locations and backdrops for stories about lost souls and haunted lands whose respective histories converge. Recurring images include the scorched desert and the empty road; the chase and the hideout; the stylised treatment of death and suicide sometimes shown as sacrifice; and moments of contemplation, reflection and hallucination. The visual tropes have been extended to other spaces such as post-industrial, urban and environmental wastelands. We will discuss the ways in which badlands function as terminal, liminal, and/or transitional spaces in the context of narratives of settler colonisation.

COURSE LEARNING OBJECTIVES (CLOS)

Students who pass this course should be able to:

1. Relate the use of landscape in a variety of films and contexts to broader socio-historical issues;

- 2. Consider aesthetic, stylistic, narrative, and generic conventions and usage in relation to the role of landscape in cinema;
- 3. Demonstrate an understanding of the visual and narrative tropes associated with cinematic badlands;
- 4. Devise projects which creatively engage with the visual and narrative tropes associated with cinematic badlands;
- 5. Demonstrate an ability to analyse the relation between the scholarship in the field of cinema studies, specifically relating to landscape, critical theory, and film examples;
- 6. Develop research questions and research projects;
- 7. Present research outcomes in written and oral forms.

TEACHING FORMAT

The course will be organised around weekly screenings and weekly seminars where student participation will be essential.

MANDATORY COURSE REQUIREMENTS

In addition to achieving an overall pass mark of 50%, students must:

 Submit the essays and assignments, on or by the specified dates (subject to such provisions as are stated for late submission of work)

WORKLOAD

The expected workload for a 30-point course is 300 hours over the trimester or 20 hours per teaching week.

screenings and with reference to the critical literature introduced in the course. All essays will be due on 21 August, no later than 2pm.

Creative/Critical analysis of a badland. In this reflexive exercise, students are to produce a creative/essayistic text featuring a cinematic badland and present it in class on 16 September. 19
August. The form of the presentation is open.

Students must discuss their plans with the course coordinator. They must consider the availability and access to visual and technical resources required to complete the project.

The purpose of the exercise will be to develop an understanding of badlands through an engagement with their iconography and aesthetics. Students are invited to draw material from existing work (film, photography, aural and visual media, visual arts, literature...). The outcomes of this exercise will be in 2 distinct parts:

- a. a created "text" in the form of edited clips, slide shows, web-based montage or any other form agreed upon with the course coordinator.
- b. a presentation in class with discussion on Tuesday 16th September.
- 3. Research proposal. In the last part of the course, students will devise a research project for which they will perform a literature search and formulate a research question. Research proposals are due on 8 October, no later than 2pm. Proposals will be assessed and returned no later than 10 October. Detailed instructions are available on Blackboard.
- 4. Research essay. After receiving feedback on their research proposal, students will then complete the research essay. Due 28 October, no later than 2pm.
