PRESCRIPTION

Advanced study in the historical development of musicology as a discipline, considering a variety of methodologies and approaches that may be applied to advanced study in music. 2014 Offering: We investigate the relationship between musicology and ethnomusicology, performance, and composition, and develop an awareness of the cross-fertilisations and tensions that exist between musicology and other academic disciplines, such as literary studies. Topics examined include: the applications of feminist and queer theory; approaches to performance studies; the role of nationalism and race; the role of analysis; historiography and reception. Through an examination of these and other issues, students are encouraged to develop a critical (self) awareness that will enable them to develop, contextualise, and question their own approach to music in their academic studies more broadly. Co-taught with MUSC 344.

PAPER LEARNING OUTCOMES

Students who have successfully completed this paper will be able to:

1. gain an understanding of a variety of approaches adopted by musicologists and ethnomusicologists, both now and in the past, including the context or rationale behind these approaches
2. become increasingly and constructively critical of the methodologies they find in discourse (written, verbal) about music, including their own essays, presentations and analyses
3. develop a project based on their chosen work(s), which incorporates their chosen approach to that repertoire.

These learning outcomes contribute to the NZSM Graduate Attributes. For a full list, please see www.nzsm.ac.nz/study-here/graduate-attributes
