Tutorials: Sign-up for tutorials will be via S-Cubed, available in the first week of classes. Tutorials begin in the second week of trimester.

Using S-Cubed:

Use your internet browser to go to: <https://signups.victoria.ac.nz>.

Use your normal student login and password to sign into S-Cubed.

Click on the course you are enrolled in (INTP 203, POLS 203 or ASIA 207) and you will see information about the course and about the different tutorial sessions. Sign up to your preferred session by clicking on the “sign up” button.

Please note: If you do not sign up during the first week of trimester, you may be extremely limited in your choice of tutorial time. If you have problems please see the School Administrator, Murphy Building, 5th Floor, MY518

Communication of additional information

This course uses Blackboard and presumes that all enrolled students have valid myvuw.ac.nz addresses. Please check that this account is active and you have organised email forwarding. Additional information and any changes to the timetable or lecture and seminar programme will be advised by email, announced in lectures, and posted on the course Blackboard site.

Prescription

This course introduces students to politics and government in East Asia. It focuses primarily on China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan, and examines the political history and culture, major institutions and policy processes, economic and social development, and foreign policies of these countries.

Course learning objectives (CLOs)

Students who pass this course should be able to:

1. Research and write an academic essay on a relevant question in East Asian politics;
2. Critically discuss some of the major issues in East Asian politics;
3. Apply theories of political science to the study of East Asian politics;
4. Define key terms and respond to major questions in East Asian politics in test form;
5. Critically assess and locate relevant information on specific issues in East Asian politics.

Teaching format

This course will be taught over 24 lectures and 11 tutorials. Students are expected to actively participate in lectures and tutorials and should therefore complete the set readings prior to lectures and tutorials and come prepared to ask questions and engage the material. Students are required to research, read and reflect in order to critically assess a journal article and construct a coherent research essay and to learn a series of concepts and be able to apply these concepts and theories to the major questions in East Asian politics.

Mandatory course requirements

In addition to achieving an overall pass mark of 50%, students must:

- Submit the reading report and research essay, on or by the specified dates (subject to such provisions as are stated for late submission of work);
- Sit the first and second in-class tests;
- Attend 8 of the 11 tutorials.

Workload

In accordance with Faculty Guidelines, this course has been constructed on the assumption that students will devote 200 hours to the course throughout the trimester. An approximate indication of the hours to be spent on each component of the course is as follows:

Preparation and attendance at classes	60 hours
Breakdown of assessment
Reading Report	28 hours
First In-Class Test	28 hours
Research Essay	56 hours
Second In-Class Test	28 hours

Assessment

Assessment items	% of final grade	CLO(s)	Due date
1 Reading Report (1000 words)	20%	2, 3, 5	27 March by 5 pm
2 First In-Class Test (50 minutes)	20%	2, 4	10 April by 5 pm
3 Research Essay (2500 words)	40%	1, 2, 3, 5	20 May by 5 pm
4 Second In-Class Test (50 minutes)	20%	2, 4	5 June

Reading report

Due 27th of March; 20% of final grade; 1000 word limit.

This assignment asks you to write a report on one of the readings listed in the schedule of class (final section of this outline) other than the set text (Huang 2009). The reading report should include the following:

- A concise summary of the article; its main argument, and how the argument is made.
- A critique of the article in the context of the scholarly discussion or debate on the issue.
This will require research.
- A discussion of how this article helps you understand East Asian politics.

The report gives you the opportunity to expand your knowledge of the literature and to demonstrate your ability to critically assess a scholarly work in the field.

First in-Class Test

On 10 April; 20% of final grade; 50 minute closed book.

The first in-class test will cover material from the readings, lectures and tutorials of the first six weeks of the course. The test will have two parts:

Part A asks you to briefly define and discuss some key terms and concepts covered in the course (choose 4 out of 6).

In Part B, you are asked to write a short essay on a question from a list of five. Questions are based on the study questions at the end of the chapters of the course text and the material covered in lectures.

This in-class test assesses your knowledge of East Asian politics, expected to be gained from the lectures, discussions and readings, and the ability to organise thoughts and ideas in response to a question or problem.

Research Essay

Due 20 May; 40% of final grade; 2500 word limit.

This assignment asks you to write an essay on one of the following study questions. If you would like to deviate from one of these questions please email me or come to see me to discuss.

The focus of the research essay is on the general pattern across East Asian countries (China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan) on the chosen question/topic.

A comparative analysis is required to explain similarities and differences between at least two countries.

Research Essay Questions:

1. Was colonial rule a positive or negative force for modern political development in East Asia?
2. How can we explain political liberalization and democratic transition in some East Asian states in the post-cold war era?
3. Has 'popular will' become a primary means of maintaining state legitimacy in East Asia?
4. Have East Asian governments shifted from 'rule by law' to 'rule of law'?
5. How can we understand the problem of corruption in East Asia?
6. How can we explain the East Asian economic 'miracle'?
7. Is there an Asian model of development?
8. Has electoral reform, such as the introduction of proportional representation in Japan or village elections in China, strengthened democracy in East Asia?
9. Is a state-centric theory, a society-centric theory or a state in society theory the best explanation of state-society relations in East Asia?
10. How can we conceptualise civil society in East Asia?
11. Based on evidence from East Asia, does 'democracy result from increasing demands of the middle class expanding along with economic and social development'?
12. What ideas/ideologies have most shaped contemporary development in East Asia? Why?
13. Have new media technologies such as Sina Weibo or Facebook fundamentally changed the relationship between state and society in pluralist and non-pluralist states in East Asia?
14. What is modern state-building? Why does Huang (2009) argue 'traditional forces' are complicating the establishment of 'a polity with equal citizenship and a public authority capable of effective and efficient governance of mass society on behalf of its citizens' in East Asia?
15. What is modernity? Is there an East Asian modernity?
16. Why is there no 'Asian Union'?

This assignment allows you to demonstrate your ability to use comparative skills to examine general patterns in East Asian politics.

Second in-Class Test

On 5 June; 20% of final grade; 50 minute closed book.

The second in-class test will cover material from the readings, lectures and tutorials of the last six weeks of the course. The test will have two parts:

Part A asks you to briefly define and discuss some key terms and concepts covered in the course (choose 4 out of 6).

In Part B, you are asked to write a short essay on a question from a list of five. Questions are based on the study questions at the end of the chapters of the course text and the material covered in lectures.

This in-class test assesses your knowledge of East Asian politics, expected to be gained from the lectures, discussions and readings, and the ability to organise thoughts and ideas in response to a question or problem.

Submission and return of work

Essays should be submitted to the lecturer during the lecture or through the office essay drop-off point, Murphy Room 518, together with completed cover sheet that is available on Blackboard and/or from the office. An e-copy (Word Document) must also be submitted on Blackboard.

Essays and tests will be returned at times to be advised. If students fail to attend these times, they may collect their essay from the Office, Murphy Room 518 between the hours of 2.00 and 3.00 pm from Monday to Friday and must show their Student ID card before collection.

Extensions and penalties

Extensions

The course expects students to submit their assignments on time. Requests for extensions should be made with the lecturer in person with proper documentation before the due date. Extensions are normally given only to those with a medical certificate, or of other evidence of forces beyond your control.

Penalties

Students will be penalised for late submission of assignments – a deduction of 5% for the first day late, and 2% per day thereafter, up to a maximum of 8 days. Work that is more than 10 weekdays late can be accepted for mandatory course requirements but may not be marked. Penalties may be waived if there are valid grounds (for example, illness [presentation of a medical certificate will be necessary] or similar other contingencies). In all such cases, prior information will be necessary.
